BULKHEADS SOON TO BE REMOVED

Bingham, Utah, Dec. 19.—The bulkheads of the upper levels of the Apex mine will probably be removed next Wednesday, according to tentative plans discussed today by members of the sheriff's forces. The proposal was broached to some of the deputies by several Bingham residents, who stated that since no noises had been heard emanating from the tunnels in the last few days they thought it would be reasonably safe to open the mine.

No definite decision in the matter will be reached until the return of Sheriff Smith from Salt Lake. In the sheriff's absence Deputy R. L. Eddington is in charge at headquarters, while Deputy Mike Earl has charge of the guards at the mine.

The heavy and deep snow on the mountain is a source of great inconvenience to the guards. To make the trip from town to the mine now requires two hours or more. On the mountain top the snow is from two to three feet deep. Deputy Frank Sorenson on horseback this afternoon attempted to make the round of the tunnels, but before progressing half way was forced to abandon the trip as his horse was exhausted by floundering about in the snow.

Because of the difficulty experienced by the guards in traveling to and from the tunnels and to enable the deputies to make the rounds of the various workings several sets of snowshoes and skis will probably be ordered.

Members of the sheriff's forces said today that they are confident that Lopez is confined behind the bulkheads, which for several days have sealed the upper levels of the mine above the Andy tunnel. As to whether he is alive, there is a difference of opinion although most of the deputies say they believe the bandit must be in serious condition from want of food, water and clothing and it is not thought possible that he can survive another five days.

Following the smoking process by which the mine was filled with deadly fumes for three days, the bulkheads, a coat and dinner bucket known to have been used by Lopez were found by the searchers. This indicates to the deputies, they say, that the Mexican must be in want of such articles. It is further argued by them that his shoes and clothing were badly torn during the chase over and through the mountainous west of Utah. Although there are many who say they doubt that Lopez is in the mine, at least two men, Bill Koras and Samuel Rogers, are reported as saying they have met and talked with Lopez in the Andy tunnel. Only one of these men can be found and there is some difference of opinion as to his story. The other man, Rogers, has disappeared since the report that he said he had talked with Lopez, but members of the sheriff's force say they have every reason to believe the story told by him is true in essence.

NATIONAL MUSEUM'S HISTORICAL EXHIBIT

Washington, Dec. 20.—What is believed to be one of the most interesting historical and educational exhibits ever shown is the collection illustrating water transportation, such as models, machinery and accessories of early steamboats in the national museum here.

The collection comprises about 500 models of water transportation of various types from different countries, conspicuous among which are the boats invented and built in the United States at an early date, each of which, at one time or another, has been claimed as the first steamboat.

"It is now held, however," says a statement issued from the national museum today, "that there was no individual first steamboat, but there were several patented at the same time. As early as the latter part of the seventeenth century various suggestions were made relative to the propulsion of vessels by steam power and various experiments were tried. The most important of these experiments were carried on in this country."

TAMPICO CITY QUIET.

Mexico City, Dec. 20.—The rebels have not returned to the vicinity of Tampico since their retirement on December 14. Everything is quiet there today and telegraphic communication is open between Tampico and the federal capital.

DRAMATIC READERS IN WEBER ACADEMY
LECTURE COURSE

T. Earl Pardoe and Moroni Olsen, the two local dramatic readers, gave the fourth number of the 1913-1914 Weber academy lecture course last night at the academy and the large crowd that greeted them was a tribute to their popularity. Last night was the first opportunity that Ogdens people have had to judge of the real ability in the different lines of their art and the applause which followed each reading was a testimony of complete satisfaction. Not the least pleasing feature of the entertainment was the attitude of the two young men toward each other, not one of jealousy, but of comradeship and deep interest in each other's work.

The program was opened with a literary introduction by Mr. Pardoe, in which he explained the different elements of dramatic art. The three elements, he said, were recitation, dramatic reading and impersonation. Recitation, he continued, was a narration—just the plain telling of a story; drama permitted of activity and impersonation called into play all the powers of the actor. Mr. Pardoe also gave a brief review of the poets and playwrights whose works were presented.

Following Mr. Pardoe's talk, Mr. Olsen recited "Mandala" and "Mother o' Mine" by Kipling. Both were given in well modulated voice and with pleasing effect.

The first act of "The Gilded Fool," by Guy Carleton, was next given by Mr. Pardoe. This play was written for laughing purposes only and, as the plot was unfolded by Mr. Pardoe, the platform seemed filled with people, so realistic were his gestures and changes of facial expression and voice.

Mr. Olsen's next number was the first act of "The Devil's Disciple," by Bernard Shaw, and his reading of this great protest against hypocrisy, by the great English playwright, brought out every character with vivid distinctness. His interpretation of the lines of Richard Dudgeon, "The Devil's Disciple," could not have been better.

Mr. Pardoe chose as his closing number the first act of "Hamlet" by Shakespeare. Blank verse is the most difficult kind of reading by a dramatic reader, but the number was handled by Mr. Pardoe with perfect vocal control and a fine depth of understanding.

The program was closed with the reading of Tennyson's classic poem, "The Passing of Arthur," by Mr. Olsen, and his interpretation of its impressive lines held the audience.

It is safe to say that few dramatic readers who have appeared locally are superior to the two local young men. Both have perfectly controlled voices that carry well and are of pleasing quality and their interpretative ability would give rank with the best lyceum readers.

NOTICE

Members Queen Esther, No. 44 O. E. S., special meeting, Monday, December 22, 7:30 p. m. Installation of officers and initiation. By order of W. M.

JUDGE M. L. RICHEY TO BE THE SPEAKER
SUNDAY NIGHT

The meeting of the Sunday Night club tomorrow evening in the Guild hall of the Church of the Good Shepherd will be addressed by the Hon. Morris L. Richey, judge of the third district court of Utah. Judge Richey is the chancellor of the district of Utah, and senior warden of St. Mark's cathedral of Salt Lake.

The wonderful advance in scientific learning, that makes this century the most remarkable in the history of human thought, has had its effect upon the theological thought of the day, and the subject of the address will be "Faith and Science," or the relationship between the new learning and the historic faith of Christendom. This will be an appropriate theme, as December 21 is St. Thomas day, the disciple who demanded proof for his faith.

The meeting, which begins at 7:30 p. m., is open to the general public and there will be an opportunity for a discussion of the subject at the close of the address.

Lowe's are headquarters for Community and 1847 Silverware.

CHRISTMAS GIVING AND THE "SPUGS"

The spirit and method of much of the Christmas giving has been denounced by the leaders of the "Spug" movement, and much of the Christmas giving has been called a waste. The possibility of this is the morning theme and the "Naturalness of Christmas" is the evening theme in the First Presbyterian church, Sunday.

Lawrence Greenwell will render the morning Christmas solos. Mrs. Bartlett and Miss Hamill will render the evening music.

THEATERS

COMIC OPERA HERE TOMORROW NIGHT.

In "The Chocolate Soldier," whose dress parade will begin here tomorrow at the Orpheum, there is assurance of a comic opera that lives up to the meaning of its classification. This work, beginning in America last season, unknown and unannounced, was greeted with a chorus of enthusiastic praise. Oscar Straus is said to have written harmonies around the keenly witty ideas of George Bernard Shaw that overflow with music to be remembered and enjoyed by the musician equally with the hearer who is willing to admit his musical illiteracy.

The Whitney Opera company will be the largest of the theatrical year, and will include the famous Whitney Opera Company orchestra, the largest orchestra that has been used for light opera advertisement.

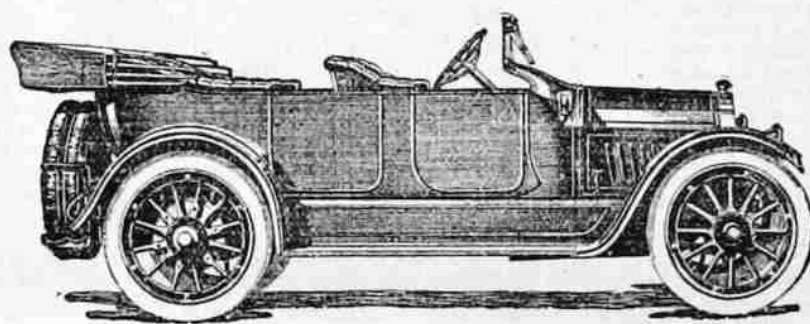

COLE

Grandfather's clock makes a good heirloom
but it won't keep time.

GRANDFATHER'S clock was manufactured by a single man. It took this single man years to make it and when this single man got through with grandfather's clock, that primitive time-piece took up a great deal of space, looked grand and all that, but—it wouldn't keep time. Why? Because the chap who made grandfather's clock was not a specialist—he was a carpenter, a cabinet-maker, a machinist, a scientist and several other things—meaning that he was a jack of all trades and—you know the rest. Before they got watches that would keep trains from bumping together and manage great cities on time they had to turn the job over to specialists.

THE same thing is true in every industry. Take the automobile industry, for instance. When the people demanded better cars for less money they turned the job over to specialists. They said: "The best car can be made only from the best units and the best units can be made only by the best parts builders—the standard parts builders." Whereupon the Cole Motor Car Company of Indianapolis caught the cue first and built a car entirely of standard parts—and they called the new type of car THE STANDARDIZED CAR.

THIS car accomplishes what other cars attempt—it is actually the better car for less money which you said some day some one would build. This is the proof—a Cole Touring Car with a wheel base of 120 inches, four cylinders, sturdy, quiet, with appealing lines, completely equipped, Delco electric self-cracking and all—2050.00 f. o. b. BILLIARD MATCH
IN SALT LAKE

Salt Lake, Dec. 20.—Billiard fans are awaiting with interest the championship billiard match at the Commercial club this afternoon between Willis H. Bothe, Jr., and F. F. Phelps two crack non-professional players. The match will begin at 2 o'clock at the club and will be the finals in the club handicap tournament, which has been in progress for the past month.

Both players were given the same rating—24 points above scratch—by the handicapping committee, so the game will be on even terms and promises to be the most exciting contest of the kind that has been seen in Salt Lake for some time.

She was also seriously wounded by one of the bullets.
